

SEATTLE SQUEEZE CONTINUES

The #SeattleSqueeze is the period over the next five years where private and public construction projects will put pressure on our transportation system, changing how we all travel through and around Seattle. Plan ahead and give yourself extra time to get to your destination, whether traveling by bike, bus, car, truck, or another mode of transportation.

Visit www.seattle.gov/traffic for the tools and information you need to get around during the #SeattleSqueeze.

Can you change the way you get downtown?
Here are some ideas:

Come in earlier or later.

Most people commute in the morning between 7-9 AM, and in the afternoon between 3-6 PM. Talk to your boss about changing the hours you work.

Leave your car at home.

Try biking, walking, carpool, vanpool, or public transit.

Give yourself extra travel time.

Traffic will be slower and will last longer throughout the day.

Tell us your questions and ideas.

We are here to help.

What is the City of Seattle Doing to Prepare?

SDOT and its partner agencies are working together to manage congestion during this challenging period, limit the impact on commuters and businesses, and keep downtown open for business.

Here are five ways we're keeping people and goods moving safely through downtown Seattle:

Monitoring and managing traffic in real time

Reducing drive-alone trips downtown by encouraging travelers to shift their commuters.

Investing in transit

Managing the public right of way to limit the impact of construction and parked cars

Keeping the public across our region updated
